CCL Label chooses Systec

CCL Label has chosen a Systec management system to manage every level of its business – from estimating and production right through to stock control management.

Systec is a locally-written software system specifically designed for flexographic printers in the labelling and narrow-web industry, and is one of only a few such flexo-specific systems offered worldwide.

Systec Print Solutions, which has been operating in South Africa since April 2008, is headed by Anton de Klerk and Riaan Scholtz, who collectively offer close to 30 years' experience in the printing industry.

Their aim was to provide South African printers with world-class, locally-written customised management software, backed up by knowledgeable and dependable support; and to offer everything from one company (software, hardware, installation, training, maintenance and support).

The partners spotted a gap in the market for management information software specifically designed for the narrow-web label market.

'Most available systems geared for the commercial, packaging or web printing industries can also be used for label printers, but we decided to develop software specifically for the label market with its unique features and terminology,' explains Systec's Riaan Scholtz.

'With the guidance and initiative of our first customer – Track & Trace in Johannesburg – we started developing our Systec management information system to suit the company's specific requirements. As our customer base grew, so did our knowledge base,' Riaan adds.

'We are proud of what we have achieved over a relatively short period of time. Our customers have seen the benefit of implementing our Systec management information system, and results to date have laid a stable platform for our software's future success. As we strive to be the market leader in our field, software development will never stop, as technology will always require changes.'

From its offices in Johannesburg and Cape Town, Systec Print Solutions offers customer support with on-site training and consulting
